Fund Manager Comment

Performance for the Month

The benchmark declined 5.13% in June 2022. The Qatar Exchange Index (QETR) fell again in June (-5.64%) after a sharp fall in May. The QE Islamic Index fell by a similar amount (-4.97%) dragged down by large cap stocks. Only the telecoms sector bucked the trend. Global equity markets fell sharply, down 8.66%, dragged down by developed markets on fears of a US recession brought on by Federal Reserve Tightening. Emerging markets fell -6.65% helped by China which was up +6.56%. Global commodities collapsed -10.9%, led down by US natural gas prices which collapsed -33.4% and oil prices which fell 7.8%. Regional markets were mostly in the red; Dubai Financial Market fell again, -3.7%; Abi Dhabi fell 6.8% and Saudi fell 10.8%. In year to date 2022 the fund's NAV increased by 7.16% vs. the benchmark index up 3.24%, outperforming by 3.92%.

Market Review

Banks and Industrials led the QE Index down. Investment Holding Group (IGRD) and Qatar Aluminium (QAMC) were the worst performing stocks for both the QE and QERI indices. Gulf International Services (GISS) and Qatar Electricity and Water (QEWS) were the best performing stocks in June for the QE Index. For QERI Index, Qatar Industrial Manufacturing (QIMD) was the best performing stock together with Qatar Electricity & Water (QEWS).

Portfolio Investment Strategy

The Qatar market is indecisive. Many large cap stocks are trading at high valuations which means the index could struggle to make new highs again this year. A lot will be dependent on mid and small cap stocks taking over market leadership to see whether we can return to 2022 highs or whether we continue to trade sideways. Overall Qatar is fairly priced as cheaper valuations reflect less attractive economic prospects relative to regional equities.
